IGDA DC Chapter Meeting
June 28th, 2016 (@IGDA_DC)

INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION: OUR STORY

This is a story about how a bunch of strangers got together and made a game about a train by working ~(once a month) over 4.5 years.

...it's also a story about how I learned what it means to be an amateur.

As indie game developers you may have been involved in a number of projects that implode or become inactive; for many reasons, this is a common experience within our community.

This certainly happened to me right before my transition from IGDA Albany to IGDA DC.

GLOBAL GAME JAM™

INNOVATION, EXPERIMENTATION, COLLABORATION

www.globalgamejam.org

After Global Game Jam 2010, IGDA DC heard from many of its members that they did not know how to fully participate in a large game jam.

To address this issue, the chapter decided to organize a few small game jams leading up to the next Global Game Jam.

This was my first project with the chapter, which led to a short tablet game being published on the App Store.

! INTRODUCTION: GENESIS

Based on the positive reception of this first game jam, we decided to hold a second.

What happened next was the genesis of the project Tumbleweed Express and the founding of The Dirigiballers, LLC.

Subject: IGDA DC: November Gam Jam

Hey Sam,

I think I could host the next game jam at my place...

Cheers,

(VERSION 0.4)

Attendees of MAGFest played 196 games of Tumbleweed Express and generated 259 unique tickets that included: feedback, feature requests, bugs, and user experience issues. After cataloging these issues, the top items included:

Add Radar; could be a purchasable option (14 Requests)

Boss needs indicators for where to shoot and colliders (8)

Destructible spawners (8)

Mouse sensitivity needs to be adjustable (7)

Iterate on design of battle menu; it's confusing (6)

Weapon switching is slow and cumbersome (5)

KICKSTARTER

Why KICKSTARTER?

The Dirigiballers have chosen Kickstarter as a funding platform because we view it as the most efficient and intuitive tool to engage with our audience; additionally, we think it fits in best with our unique development style and we hope to meet people who are passionate about the project through this venue. We also hope that you will enjoy the list of backer rewards that we have planned as they were very fun to come up with!

The lion's share of the funding we receive will go directly towards the final production and release of Tumbleweed Express, which includes: commercial licenses for the development tools we use, some hardware needed for testing, help with attending conventions, and the marketing that will help increase exposure enabling the project's success! Below is the total rundown of the development aspects that your donations will be funding.

Tumbleweed Express Development Blog

Welcome! This blog has been created to chart the development of Tumbleweed Express, a "Travel Defense" game in which the player controls a steam-powered train that travels along the countryside utilizing mounted weaponry to fend off attacking enemies in a "Western Steampunk" setting. This project originated at the 2011 Fall Game Jam that was hosted by the DC Chapter of the International Game Developers Association.

Post Mortem: How to (not) get funded on Kickstarter in 30 days

On Thursday, October 2nd at 2:00p.m. EST the Tumbleweed Express Kickstarter campaign ended unsuccessfully having reached ~22% of its funding goal. Firstly, I want to express my sincerest gratitude towards everyone who supported us during our campaign. The help we received from total strangers was powerful and surprising and the support we received from friends and family was heartwarming and encouraging. We met lots of new people, formed friendships and connections, and strengthened our ties with the communities that we came from. However, due to the all-or-nothing nature of Kickstarter we unfortunately will receive none of the amount that was raised.

Mostly I felt relieved at the end of it, as the negative emotions of frustration and disappointment had already run their course leading up to the final hours of the campaign. Despite the technical failure of the campaign however I do want to stress that this past month was the most successful, intense, and positive marketing push that our project has had in the three years we've been working on it. That said, I want to evaluate the campaign and give my impressions on what happened using the following categories:

What I Know We Did Right: Actions we took that tangibly benefit our campaign

What I Think We Did Right: Actions we took that, while imaginably positive, did not appear to tangibly benefit our campaign

What I Know We Did Wrong: Actions we took that tangibly hurt our campaign

What I Think We Did Wrong: Actions we took that, while imaginably negative, did not

! YEAR 4 – 4.5: SCOPING BACK

Having an unsuccessful Kickstarter was still valuable because the project's audience expanded and the team better understood what fans wanted. However, it was time to return to the game design document and scope back (e.g., by removing experimental features like VR and Co-Op).

! YEAR 4 – 4.5: PRESSING ON

Thanks to the project's expanding community and the team's continual updating of the project, social media, Steam Greenlight, etc...

Your title, "Tumbleweed Express," has been Greenlit!

To continue, you will need to complete the necessary digital paperwork to sign up as a new Steamworks Partner.

Before you get started, you may want to check out this page of frequently asked questions:

At the end of that process, you'll have an appID and account in the Steamworks Developer Program with access to the necessary SDK, documentation, and configuration website to prepare your application for launch.

To continue, please return to your item's page

in Steam

Greenlight (and make sure you're logged in with the account that submitted the item), where you'll see a big button to continue this process.

This series of web forms is a new process that we are testing out. If you have any questions or encounter any issues while completing the forms, please contact us at

Sincerely, The Steam Business Team

GOALS: EXPECTED PROJECT OUTCOMES

1. Make a fun, 3D game about a train in approximately 3 years time.
2. Submit a build to the Independent Games Festival (IGF).
3. Complete the project with support for Windows, Mac, and Linux.
4. Release the game on Steam.

CONCLUSION: WHAT I LEARNED

Am·a·tuer (noun): The English word amateur came from a French word which in turn came from a Latin word that meant “lover.”

In English, amateurs are so called because they do something for the love of doing it and not for pay. (Merriam-Webster)
