Web Site Extra Credit (up to 20 pts)

(due with web site, Oct 4)

Create an entirely new look for your web site by creating a new stylesheet (css).

A significant advantage to using a separate stylesheet to style your html pages, as opposed to styling in-line or in the head section of your html page, is that you can switch one stylesheet for another and the look of your website will be updated. We've seen examples of this at zen garden, where the content of the web page is static, but the look is dramatically changed through the use of different style sheets:

For this extra credit, you will create a new stylesheet. Points will be determined based on the amount of effort and the substantial visible difference between the old and the new look.

If you are interested, on the class web site under Misc. Info there are instructions and a script for switching between the two looks.
