

Project 4: Binary Search Tree

Due Friday, April 8

In this lab you will be implementing a binary search tree.

The first part of this lab will be written questions on Binary Search Trees, and the second part will be the coding of a binary search tree.

You may work with a partner or you may work alone. If you choose to work with a partner, make sure:

- you both turn in the project
- you include both names on the project.
- Equally, note your partner's name in canvas.

Please be aware that if your partner flakes on you, you are still responsible for completing the mini project and turning it in on time.

Time: This project may take about 8 hours, and should be worked on in a spread-out manner, as opposed to one sitting.

★★★★☆ In terms of difficulty, I consider this to be a 3.5 out of 5

This miniproject is closely tied to videos and ppts associated with the week6 on my web site (<https://www.eecis.udel.edu/~yarringt/CISC220/>)

Helpful Information:

1. You can compare strings using `>`, `<` and `==`. In other words, you can write:

```
string s1 = "cat";
string s2 = "dog";
if (s1 < s2) {
    cout << "cats rule!!!" << endl;
}
```

OR:

if (s1 == s2) {
    cout << "cats are equal to dogs"<<endl;
} else {
    cout << "cats are very different from dogs"<<endl;
}
```

2. Strings are ordered by their ALPHABETICAL order.
 - a. NOT BY THEIR LENGTH (that's such a computer science thing to even think that!)
 - b. Think of it this way: what page in the dictionary would a word occur on (approximately)? Then that is how the greater and less than is determined.
So "apples" would occur on about page 20. "monkeys" might occur on page 300, and "zebra" might occur on page 500.

0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25
A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R	S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z

“apples” < “monkeys” < “zebra”

Part 1 (23 pts):

Given the following sequence of numbers: 9, 6, 2, 18, 1, 7, 8, 27, 42, 12, 10, 25

1. (4 pts) Draw the resulting Binary Search Tree
2. (1 pt) How many steps will it take to find 25? 10? 1?
3. (2 pts) How many nodes are in the tree? How many levels are in the tree?
4. (3 pts) The number of nodes in the tree falls between 2^{x-1} and $2^x - 1$. What is the value of x in this case?
5. (2 pts) How does it relate to the number of levels in this tree? (and thus, how does it relate to the number of steps needed to find 25?)

Given the following Binary Search Tree:

1. (3 pts) Remove 73 using the steps for removing a node with no children. Draw the resulting tree.
2. (3 pts) Remove 70 using the steps for removing a node with 1 child. Draw the resulting tree.
3. (5 pts) Remove 30 using the steps for removing a node with 2 children. Draw the resulting tree.

Part 2: Writing a Binary Search Tree

For this lab, you are going to write 9 methods in the BST.cpp class (Binary Search Tree class methods). The methods are as follows:

- 1) void printTreePre(TNode *n); The pre-order traversal (this method should be short – in essence 3 lines and a stopping condition)
- 2) void printTreeIO(Tnode *n); The in-order traversal (again, short)
- 3) void printTreePost(TNode *n); The post-order traversal (REALLY LONG – nah, just kidding – another short one)

0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25
A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R	S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z

Note: for the three tree traversal methods, there is an accompanying method that takes no input parameters (and I have already written for you). This method solely exists because these methods are recursive, and thus I needed a method to call the traversal methods you are going to write with the root of the tree as a parameter. If that sounds confusing, don't worry about it. Just know you have to write the three tree traversal methods. But the one I wrote also has to be part of this class definition.

- 4) `bool insert(string s, string l);` The insert method (the foundation of BSTs). It takes as input the acronym (s) and the definition of the acronym (l). It returns a bool – true if a new node is inserted, and false if the acronym string s is already in the tree.
- 5) `void setHeight(TNode *n);` This method sets the height field of nodes in the tree. It is called every time you insert a node. That node's height is 1. You must then work your way up the tree (by going to each of the inserted node's ancestors) and updating their heights. Note that the height of a node is determined as follows: a node's height is the larger of its left and right children's heights plus one. So, for instance, to determine the height of node n, look at the height of node n's left child (3) and the height of node n's right child (5). The right child's height is larger, with 5. Add 1. The height of node n is 6. For more details, please watch the binary search tree videos.
- 6) `TNode *find(string s);` The find method (almost identical to the insert method, only it returns the node containing the data to be found and NULL otherwise). This method takes the acronym string s as input parameter and finds that acronym in the tree, returning the node if it is successfully found, and NULL otherwise.
- 7) `TNode *remove(string s);` The remove method (This isn't that bad – it's finding the to be removed node (and that will be the node returned, eventually). If the node has 0 children, call `removeNoKids`. If it has 1 child, call `removeOneKid`. If it has 2 nodes, find the node that will replace the node to be removed, copy its data into that node's data section, and then either call `removeNoKids` or `removeOneKid` with that node whose data you just copied. (again, watch the videos for more information!) When done, return the node that was removed.
- 8) `TNode *removeNoKids(TNode *tmp);` The removeNoKid method removes the node tmp from the tree, assuming tmp has no kids
- 9) `TNode *removeOneKid(TNode *tmp, bool leftFlag);` The remove_one_kid method. The `leftFlag` indicates whether the node's child is either the left child or the right child, and `tmp` is the node to be removed.

This lab uses a binary search tree to find common acronyms used in texting, and their associated word or phrase. For example, LOL would be the acronym, with its meaning being "Laugh Out Loud". Note that while we are using it for acronyms and their associated meaning, we could just as easily be using it for words and their definitions, zip codes and their associated townships (or vice versa), people and their associated cell numbers, or just about any data (especially data that needs to use find, insert, and remove relatively quickly).

I'm giving you everything but the nine BST.cpp methods mentioned above.

I'm also giving you 4 text files (3 for testing your methods, then the large texting acronym dictionary).

I'm giving you a main function that allows you to comment in each part one at a time to test the different features.

0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25
A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I	J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R	S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z

My suggestions for doing this lab:

- 1) First: Write the pre-order, in-order, and post-order traversal method. You can't test these until you write the insert method, but these are very straightforward and quick to write, and shouldn't give you any trouble.
- 2) Second – write the insert method, focusing on inserting nodes to the left. Uncomment out the first part of main and test your insert (with focus on inserting nodes to the left). Note that the heights will be wrong. You can write that method later.
- 3) Third, modify the insert method, focusing on inserting nodes to the right. This should be an else part of an if statement that's almost identical to the code you wrote for inserting to the left. Now uncomment out the second part of the main and test your insert with focus on inserting nodes to the right. Again, heights should still be wrong.
- 4) Fourth – write the set_heights method. Once you have this written, run the code again and check to make sure your heights and output match my heights and output.
- 5) Fifth: uncomment out the third part and test your output against mine so far
- 6) Sixth: Now write the find method. This should be very similar to the insert method. However, this method does not insert a new node. It either returns the node with the data you are trying to find, or it returns NULL if the data is not in the tree. When you've got find written, uncomment out part 6 and run to test.
- 7) Seventh: Now you can write the 3 remove methods. Once they're written, test by commenting out part 7 and checking with my output.
- 8) Finally, comment out everything above (just for simplicity's sake) and uncomment out part 8. Use the interface to test the following options. Make sure your output matches mine.

Output from Larger File

In MainPhrase.cpp, comment out part 1, part 2, part 3 and part 4 and uncomment out part 5. Make sure you test with the following:

- A) Find the following Acronyms: (Note that I have my output for finding these acronyms (in debug mode) below):
 - HAGN
 - YMBJ
 - GOAT
 - GB
- B) Add the following Acronym:
 - HFAL – He Farts A Lot!
- C) Find HFAL
- D) Translate the following sentences (again, my output is below):
 - BTW E1 must BYOC 2moro CU L8R
 - LBH that's TTFW KWIS JMHO
 - IMHO the PEBCAC LOL
 - AFAICT this program AGH but YMMV GLTY
 - WEG I'll TCB and TBL with POIDH
 - OMG HFAL JMHO but just MIGA

0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25
